Local league hopes for return of 27 pilfered soccer balls

By Steve Marschke

Hope Anaya would like to have her league's soccer balls back, please -- no questions asked.

The balls were taken from a league member's front porch last month after they were delivered by a shipping company, and the West Sacramento Soccer League (formerly East Yolo Soccer League) is now stuck with replacing the 27 game balls, to the tune of $450.

HOPE ANAYA

"These are game balls (not practice balls), so we spend a little more on them," said Anaya. "We had ordered one per team, so there were 27 of them."

The balls were delivered to a home at Pierce St. and Kegle Dr., where the woman receiving them paid C.O.D. Then trouble came.

"Her phone rang before she brought the box in, and she ran and got the phone and forgot for a couple of hours," said Anaya. "When she remembered and went to get the box, it was gone."

Anaya said that she hopes anyone who knows where the soccer balls are will return them, by calling her at 372-5727.

"No questions asked," she stated. "Just give us the balls."

City hall site selection moves ahead

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento city staff has been sent back to work on defining the needs of the city for a new civic center, and Mayor Bill Kristoff said he hopes to see the issue back before the city council later this month.

"Staff needs to do some work, putting together square footage and bringing together independent (cost) figures for the new city hall, community center and possibly a fire station," he said.

Thus far, city officials plan to use $7 million in bonds to finance construction of a new city hall (and possibly community center), while also hoping to build a new fire station in the city's south.

The most prominent choices for the city hall are a West Capitol Ave. property which formerly housed Lloyd Hickey's Countryland bar and a property near West Capitol Ave., Merkley Ave. and the Turner branch library. The former bar site is now owned by the city; the acreage near the library is owned by private parties.

'If city hall were to be constructed (downtown), we could get the most bang for the buck. We could help the downtown people start to create a feeling of what a downtown is all about.'

-- Mayor Bill Kristoff

All five members of the council believe city hall should be built in the downtown district, said Kristoff.

"If city hall were to be constructed there," he said, "we'd get the most bang for the buck. We could help the downtown people start to create a feeling of what a downtown is all about. Property nearby would develop more quickly."

City agencies currently pay rent for city offices at 2101 Stone Blvd. and several other locations, and when these agencies move into a new city-owned building, the money they previously paid for monthly rent would go to pay off the construction bonds, said Kristoff.

Wal-Mart awards $8,000 grant to city

From the City of West Sacramento

West Sacramento has received an industrial development grant funded by Wal-Mart Stores, Inc.

Chuck Gayden, manager of the Sacramento SAM's Club on El Camino Avenue, presented a check for $4,000 to West Sacramento Mayor Pro Tem Wesley A. Beers to be used for local industrial development activities. This represents a 2-year pledge for local job creation efforts.

"Wal-Mart Stores is proud to make this contribution as a commitment to helping improve the economy in the Sacramento area by promoting job creation," stated David Glass, president and chief executive officer of the discount retail chain.

Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., has allocated over $2 million annually in industrial development funding, to attract new industry to its trade territory and encourage existing industries and businesses in Wal-Mart communities to expand their operations.

Chuck Gayden of SAM's Club with Mayor pro tem Wes Beers of West Sacramento

Typically, industrial development awards are made in the range of $4,000 to $6,000. Because of the city's excellent application and economic development needs, said a city press release, $8,000 was awarded.

"This grant will enable us to step up our efforts in industrial expansion and attraction, with the result being increased jobs for the local community," said Val Toppenberg, who heads the city department which oversees economic development and job creation efforts. The grant funds will be used to purchase presentation equipment for business attraction.

Public financing to be asked:

Minor league park sought for West Sacto

The Sacramento Bee reported last month that a pair of Sacramento area businessmen are hoping to bring a 15,000-seat minor league baseball stadium to West Sacramento.

Warren Smith and Bob Hemond believe the proposal will cost about $25 million for the stadium and another $7 million for the Triple-A team, and that public financing would help pay for the facility, according to the Bee.

The site remains secret, according to the Bee, although West Sacramento Mayor Bill Kristoff told the News-Ledger that the baseball proponents "are looking all around" within West Sacramento city limits.

The backers believe the minor league stadium would not conflict with plans by Sacramento mayor Joe Serna to bring a major league park to that town, the Bee article stated.

The Sacramento area has not had either a minor or a major league team since the Sacramento Solons stopped playing in Sacramento in 1976.

West Sacramento mayor Bill Kristoff told the News-Ledger the baseball proposal has been moving forward, with discussions between the backers and the city.

"Like I've told them, it's got to make good business sense as far as the community is concerned," he said, indicating that he advised the developers to get their land rights in order, design a financing mechanism and find a team. "The council has been very clear we're not going to buy a property, build a stadium and buy a team."

Kristoff said he expects to see a concrete proposal from the baseball proponents around the New Year, if things go well.

City senior center program now in its fifth year of involvement

From Susan Roi West Sacramento Department of Parks and Community Services

Senior citizens from the city of West Sacramento Parks and Community Services Department Senior Center have been involved in the Adopt A School program, sponsored by the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, for five years.

Each year they have adopted a 4th or 5th grade class and shared with them a variety of skills. A few of the skills taught included line dancing, folk dancing, painting, drawing, greeting card construction, solar cooking, cookie decorating, sand crafting, ceramics, sewing, bead work, and woodworking. They have also been given the opportunity to learn about local, state, and world history through the eyes of those who have lived through it. They have also enjoyed vocational lectures, as well as lectures on the importance of good nutrition, and participated in morning exercise programs led by the stretchercise class that meets Monday - Friday at 9 a.m. at the senior center.

The seniors have also been very involved in tutoring the youth in their academics. In addition, the students have developed pen pal connections which have included picnic get-togethers.

It is a wonderful intergenerational program that benefits all of those involved. For more information call 373-5819, or Charyl Silva at 373-8383.

My loving family helps me turn 50 years old

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

"Well," said my daughter with a wicked little smile the other night as the whole family sat around the dinner table, "it's almost here, isn't it, Dad?"

"What's almost here?" I asked her.

"The big five-zero!"

"Oh, that," I said, quickly trying to think of something which might change the subject.

"That's right," said my oldest son with a chuckle, "you're going to be 50-years-old tomorrow, aren't you, old man?"

"At 9 o'clock in the morning," said my wife, always a stickler for details.

"Let's have a party," eagerly suggested my youngest son.

"No party," I pleaded.

"Why not?" asked my daughter, still smiling. "You only turn 50 once, you know."

"Exactly," I said, "and the sooner everyone forgets about it the better."

"Now that's a pretty poor attitude," interjected my middle son.

"It sure is," said my wife. "Just think of all the things you have to look forward to now that you're 50."

As my family began listing all the wonderful things which happen to men over 50, i.e., grandchildren, travel, golf, etc., I suddenly remembered a conversation I had a decade earlier with an old friend of mine who had just turned 50.

"And just look at all the great things you have to look forward to," I had told him.

"Like what?" he had asked me with interest.

"Well," I said, "there's prostate cancer, and impotence, and false teeth, and, oh, yes, don't forget that from now on you'll be hurtling towards death."

It had seemed pretty funny at the time, but now that the shoe was on the other foot, I could see why he had threatened to take a swing at me.

"Is it really true that Grandma almost couldn't get into the hospital 50 years ago to give birth to you?" my daughter asked me.

"That's right," I said.

"I haven't heard that one before," said my middle son.

"But why couldn't Grandma get into the hospital?" asked my youngest son with concern.

"Because it was really crowded," I explained. "Everybody in Sacramento was having babies back then."

"Why?" he asked with great interest.

"Yeah, Dad," said my daughter, smiling, "why don't you go ahead and explain to our little brother why everyone was having babies nine months after World War Two ended."

"But you're not really interested in junk like that, are you, Kyle?" I asked my youngest son.

"Sure I am," he quickly replied.

"Well," I reluctantly began to explain, "you see, way back when I was born, all the soldiers who had been off fighting in the war had been back home for about a year or so, and you see, well, when they all came home, one of the very first things they all did was, well...."

"They made babies," said my wife, mercifully coming to my rescue.

"That's right," I said with relief.

"Oh, I see," said Kyle with a wise nod, obviously much more versed on the subject than I had been when I was his age.

"That's right," I said again. "The soldiers made lots and lots of babies, and I ended up being one of them. It was called the Baby Boom."

"Boy, Dad," said my oldest son, slowly shaking his head, "do you realize that in less than 24 hours, you will have been hanging around on this earth for half a century?"

"I guess that's one way to put it," I said, glaring at him.

"Man, it must seem like forever since you were my age, huh?"

"To tell you the truth," I said, knowing he wouldn't believe a word of it, "it actually seems like it was just yesterday."

"Well," he said, "I think I have a statistic which more of less puts the whole thing in perspective."

"What's that?" I asked him, knowing he had always been pretty good with numbers.

"Do you realize that tomorrow at nine o'clock in the morning you're going to be 350 years old in dog years?"

Daryl Fisher's award-winning column 'My Back Pages' is just one reason the News-Ledger is West Sac's number one choice.

The N.F.L. season started off with a bang.

The Raiders lost a 24-21 overtime heartbreaker to the Tennessee Oilers and the 49ers took a beating at the hands of the Tampa Bay Bucs.

The Bucs outplayed the 49ers in every aspect of the game, even though the score was only 13-6. The 49ers are knee deep in trouble! The Niners will lose All Pro, "All-Everything" Jerry Rice for the season. Rice tore his anterior cruciate and medial collateral ligament.

QB Steve Young was knocked out of the game with his third concussion in ten months. The 49ers' bad news continues with newly acquired Kevin Greene breaking his big toe and Young's backup at quarterback, Jeff Brohm, sustaining a chipped bone in his throwing hand. He's questionable for Sunday's game in St. Louis.

Prediction: 49ers 27, Rams 10.

The Raiders, on the other hand, should have won their game but the defense allowed Eddie George to run for 216 yards. On a bright note, Raiders' QB Jeff George hooked up with Tim Brown on three touchdown passes.

The Raiders' home opener is next Monday night against the Kansas City Chiefs. Oakland 24, Kansas City 17.

The S.F. Giants still trail the Dodgers in the standings by two games. The Giants play the A's in Oakland on Wednesday night, then return home for a four game homestand against the Houston Astros.

The A's and Giants game on Labor Day drew a record crowd of 50,792. It was the largest crowd ever to watch a baseball game, World Series included, in Oakland.

The previous high attendance was 49,671 for the 1987 All-Star game.

Raiders meet Truckee on Thursday

From Patricia MacDonald
River City High School

Head coach Cathy Costanza has once again developed a varsity volleyball team who can be referred to as "contenders for the play-offs."

The last day of the school year is the first day for R.C.H.S. Raiders volleyball. They begin their summer competing against hundreds of volleyball teams from all over the country, in the Kaepa Tournament held here in Sacramento. The month of July consists of special training by participating in the volleyball camps held at Sacramento City College and Sacramento State University. August consists of daily work-outs and drills on the Raiders' home court. Although a young team with only three seniors, who are, five time M.V.P. and All-Tournament Champion, Mary Maupin, also the recipient of the Coaches' Award, Marie Vasi, and the recipient of the Coaches' Award, Trina Zimmerman, this team will be though competition.

A look at the season and the personnel on River City High School's volleyball squad

The juniors coming up from J.V. are playing varsity ball status due to the teamwork I have been observing on the court. The three sophomores are giving their all to this team of athletes who take the court with skills and abilities they have all developed through the years.

On Thursday, September 4, at 5:30 p.m., the Raiders welcome Truckee High School for a match played at R.C.H.S. Besides a full schedule (which can be obtained by contacting R.C.H.S. at 375-7800), they also participate in three major tournaments: Yuba College Tournament; Tournament at Forest Lake Christian; and the Sacramento Invitational.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Another anniversary

The volume number on the front of the News-Ledger changed again last month, from "33" to "34." That means this is the 34th year of consecutive, weekly publication of your local, independent newspaper.

To continue publishing after over 1,700 consecutive weeks is something of an achievement, as industry trends have not been kind to local, independent newspapers. Many, particularly in California, have either gone out of business or been swallowed into multi-newspaper chains whose owners have little familiarity or concern for the local communities whose news they now control.

This publication has no plans to do either.

In the past, West Sacramento has seen its share of newspapers come and go, and most of them had some kind of political agenda besides the desire to simply serve their community.

There was a pro-incorporation newspaper which went out of business shortly after cityhood was approved. There was a pro-Southport Industrial Park newspaper started by a group of local developers and businesspeople, who withdrew their support when they accomplished their goal, and there was a pro-card room newspaper which lobbied hard for the public's approval of a West Sacramento casino, and folded up a week after they lost that vote.

Yolo County has five community newspapers, of which only two are owned within the same community they serve and only one of those (this one) is independent of a chain.

What's so wonderful about having a newspaper owned here, beholden to no one? A look at different newspapers give will yield a clue. Newspapers owned by disinterested parties living elsewhere tend to be more interested in their corporate bottom line (i.e., how many dollars they can ship from your community to their company headquarters) than in serving the interests of your local community. They tend to adhere to a journalistic practice of "don't rock the boat," choosing to parrot the official lines issued by local government and the local business community at the expense of original, insightful reporting.

Local ownership tends to be more interested in the local community; although these newspapers, too, make mistakes, they tend to make their mistakes on the side of advocating for their constituents, and less because of the fear of alienating someone's dollar.

These generalities, of course, do not apply to every newspaper. But a look at a paper and the issues it tackles over a long period of time tends to betray a newspaper's view of its own responsibilities. The public can decide from this whether they believe a publication is an asset to their town, a liability, or just part of the scenery.

The News-Ledger is not perfect, but it is responsive to West Sacramento and is not (and never has been) bought and paid for by a particular political faction.

Several thousand of you believe this is something worth paying for. Thank you.

Commentary, Part II:

City's point of view on the $4.7 million land judgment

Last week, the News-Ledger published the first part of a city commentary on how the $4.7 million land judgment against the city for taking control of property in the Broderick neighborhood came about. Here is part two of that opinion piece. It is in a "question and answer" format:

From Melinda Posner
Community Relations
Redevelopment & Housing Agency
City of West Sacramento

Q: What did the jury decide the property was worth?

A: The jury set the price of the property at $41 per square foot, more than four times the 1995 appraised price. This is also more than double, in fact nearly triple, the highest price ever paid for property in West Sacramento. The highest amount ever paid was $14 per square foot for the old Rice Growers Association of California mill property, by the Norwegian Scanvik firm in 1990. Since then Scanvik has submitted evidence to the county assessor demonstrating that the value has actually gone down to $5 per square foot. The jury's decision ignored the fact that property two blocks away from the site sold for $9 per square foot just days before the date of valuation of the condemned property.

Q: What options does the city have now that the jury decided to set the price for the property at $41 per square foot?

A: The city has four alternatives:

1. Purchase all five parcels at the cost of $41 per square foot. This would cost the city $4.7 million, plus attorney's fees for the property owners, and the interest from the date of valuation (March 23, 1995).

2. Abandon the condemnation of all five parcels. If the city decides to abandon the condemnation of all five parcels, it will have to pay legal costs (including the city's and the property owners') and some amount for damages. Both the property owners and their appraisers agreed that the buildings on the sites were of no value, and therefore, the city's action to demolish the unsafe and blighted structures has actually saved the property owners money. The amount of damages will likely be a subject of dispute, however. The cost of total abandonment is estimated to be approximately $1 million.

3. Abandon the condemnation on some of the five parcels. This would mean the city would pay the $41 per square foot price plus attorney's fees and interest on any portion of the five parcels.

4. Appeal the case. It is unknown what the cost of outcome of an appeal would be, but it is expected to be very costly and time consuming. In any case, the outcome of a successful appeal would be an order for a new trial.

Q: Will the costs the city incurs bankrupt the city?

A: Absolutely not. The city did not lose $4.7 million. The amount the city will pay if it abandons all five parcels is estimated at $1 million and these funds have already been set aside. The city was required to set aside the amount of money it would cost to purchase the property, based on the appraised value, after the City Council made the decision to condemn the property. The "deposit of probable compensation" was made in the amount of $1,245,000 on March 20, 1995. If attorney's fees and damages for full abandonment do not exceed this amount, no further expenditure by the city will be required.

Q: Will the costs incurred by the city jeopardize plans to construct a senior housing center, senior center, City Hall or other community project?

A: No. As stated above, the amount the city will pay to abandon is estimated at $1 million. These funds have already been set aside.

Q: If the city abandons the condemnation, how does this affect the overall goal of removing blight and assembling land to redevelop the area?

A: The blighted uses on the site have been removed by the city. The Money Store made the decision to invest $50 million in the West Sacramento riverfront. The city will continue to encourage the development of the Washington/ Riverfront area into a mix of high quality uses. The land in question will remain unassembled, i.e., not be controlled by one or few owners, and will be more difficult, though not insurmountable, to develop.

Q: Are there other facts of the case that were not revealed?

A: Yes. The jury heard that the properties were blighted but were not made aware of the crime at those sites and in the surrounding area. In fact, the properties were the site of daily police calls to deal with drunks, drug addicts, derelicts and overdosed individuals. Four murders occurred on the site in the ten years preceding condemnation and representatives of one of the property owners at one time had tired to obtain a permit to operate a methadone clinic on the site.

While the jury heard that these property owners were waiting to develop their property for fifty years, the truth of the matter is that they were approached by the city, prior to condemnation, to submit a development proposal for their property. They did not respond. In addition, the city made numerous attempts to reach an amenable agreement with them. Contrary to the picture painted by the property owners' representative of their willingness to develop their property and interest in improving the community, the fact is that they were absentee landlords -- none of them resided in West Sacramento -- and they let their property run down to the point of being one of the most active areas for criminal activity in the city.

Q: Were the property owners given ample opportunity to participate in redevelopment?

A: Yes. Prior to condemnation, the property owners were invited to submit a development proposal for their property. They did not respond. After the condemnation, the city continued attempts to reach agreement on the purchase of the property, including the idea of land swapping or exchanges for other properties within the city. The property owners were not agreeable.

Q: Didn't the city think that the value of the land would increase as a result of redevelopment efforts?

A: The purpose of redevelopment is the removal of blight and slums, and therefore, the subsequent improvement of a particular area. As an area improves it stimulates further improvements and increased private investment. This process takes time. Just as it takes decades for a city to decline, so rebuilding communities takes many years. Yes, in fact, the city did and still does expect the value of properties in the area to increase, however, it does not happen overnight.

Q: What are comparable properties valued at in the Sacramento region?

A: The only properties comparable to the subject properties are located in West Sacramento. A comparable market analysis is used by appraisers to determine what "like" properties sell for in the vicinity of a subject property. At the date of valuation, a property on the same block had just been purchased for $9 per square foot.

Q: How off the mark was the jury?

A: The jury ignored the fact the property sold for $9 per square foot just months after the appraisal on 3rd and G Streets. The jury did not fully understand the deteriorated state of the properties, nor the level of criminal activity that the properties attracted.

The jury was composed of Sacramento County residents who admitted they had no knowledge of West Sacramento or of this particular site and, therefore, probably could not appreciate the differences in land prices "just across the river."

Letters to the Editor

Land judgment

If the $4.7 million for the 2.6 acres across from the Money Store holds and Money Store does not help out with cost -- since said city clearing of land was done so at Money Store's insistence as a precondition for locating here -- THEN WEST SAC SHOULD JUST GO AHEAD AND PAY THE PRICE, TAKE OWNERSHIP AND BUILD OUR NEW CITY HALL RIGHT THERE! City could build tall enough to allow for inclusion of such important factors as a much larger and more smartly-laid-out public auditorium, senior center, community center and maybe even relocation of library. Money Store parking should be available for evening meetings and first floor of new building(s) should be reserved for parking.

By locating City Hall across from Money Store, this should also give city incentive to repair underpass west of 5th Street so our YoloBuses can provide more effective service for that area again, including our recent hourly service to and from the airport. We'll also be just a walk or a horse ride from Old Sacramento and not much further from our State Capitol building.

This $41/square foot price the Sacramento County Court has ordered West Sac to pay for subject land sounds like a dangerous precedent. When the city or county of Sacramento later decides they want land for whatever reason, won't they be obligated to pay a comparable price -- with taxpayers' money? Or maybe even more, since land on the Capitol side runs higher than on the Yolo County side. But the last thing West Sac should do is to "give the land back and still pay $2 million in damages." Just build City Hall, et al there and let's move forward.

WILLIAM A. LOWELL
West Sacramento

Thanks!

We would like to thank everyone who stopped by the Allied Services for Kids (ASK) booth at the Yolo County Fair this year -- and especially those fairgoers who brought raffle tickets for the great Univega all-terrain bike generously sponsored by Davis Bike Shop! Ron Lopez, of Davis, was the lucky winner. This raffle, along with other fundraisers, are a vital component of the monies needed to provide crisis intervention and prevention services for our teens in Yolo County.

ASK is a collaborative program between three agencies -- Yolo Family Service Agency, Suicide Prevention of Yolo County and Yolo Community Care Continuum, who joined forces in 1994 to put in place resources and help for teens who were either runaway, or in serious difficulty in their family or school situations. This program is funded through grants so there is no cost to the teen or their family. United Way Sacramento Area recently approved a grant which will support ASK services for the next year.

Again, we appreciate the support of the community for ASK.

Review:

Circus proves another good show

By Steve Marschke

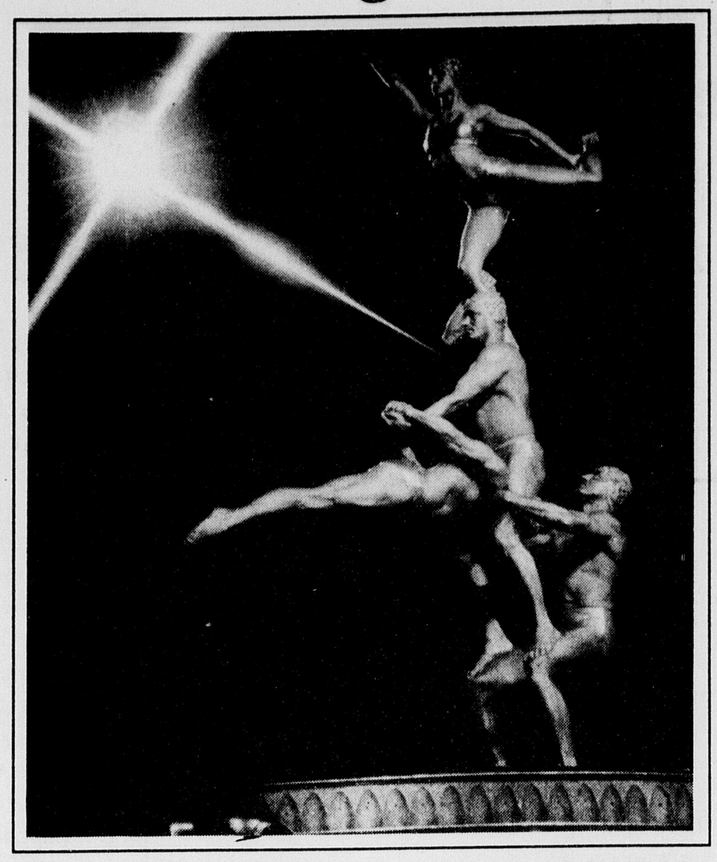

The circus is coming to town.

No offense to Carson & Barnes, whose circus visited West Sacramento earlier this summer, but the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey circus remains the standard to which circuses aspire -- schmaltzy, chintzy costumes and all.

A preview of the show in San Francisco last weekend proved the Ringling Bros. circus continues to come up with crowd pleasers and continues to include acts which appeal to youth, in addition to traditional acts featuring performing tigers, acrobats and trapeze acts.

In fact, what's notable about the circus in recent years is its increasing reliance on human performers, and a decreasing percentage of animal acts.

Yes, this year's circus features a number of tigers, elephants, Lippazaner stallions, a hippopotomus and other animals -- and some of these acts continue to please even the most jaded circus-watcher -- but it is the variety and spectacle of the human acts which carries this year's program.

The "Golden Pyramid" takes shape in the form of living statues in the 127th Edition of the "Greatest Show on Earth"

Animal rights activists are generating an increasing amount of publicity with their claims that circus animals are consigned to a life of misery and virtual "enslavement" when used as a part of a circus. Although the spectacle of a score of elephants performing in unison does add to the spectacle of the circus, this particular circus might not suffer too much if it let them go.

The people performers might take up the slack, as this year's troupe did.

Picture, for instance, bronze-painted acrobats entering the ring on a pedestal, then moving slowly into one statuesque pose after another, using each other for support, often in incredible feats of strength and balance, and holding each pose as if made of stone.

Or a troup of New York youths playing Globetrotter-style basketball. But on unicycles.

Or other young folks showing off their derring-do on inline skates, leaping over each other from launching ramps.

Or a high dive act in which a performer stands on the edge of a high platform, then arches backward to flip several times on his way to a standing landing on a deep cushion below.

You could hear the crowd hold its breath during the quieter parts of performances like these, and there were many more feats of grace and athleticism equally impressive.

The clown acts are also a pleasure, whether it's intermission entertainment or one of the several featured performances.

New to this year's circus is a chance for young folks to try some of the circus equipment (with help and safety lines, of course, and at a level close to the floor). Kids can balance on a ball or try swinging on a trapeze if they show up an hour before show time and make it through a line at each of the three rings.

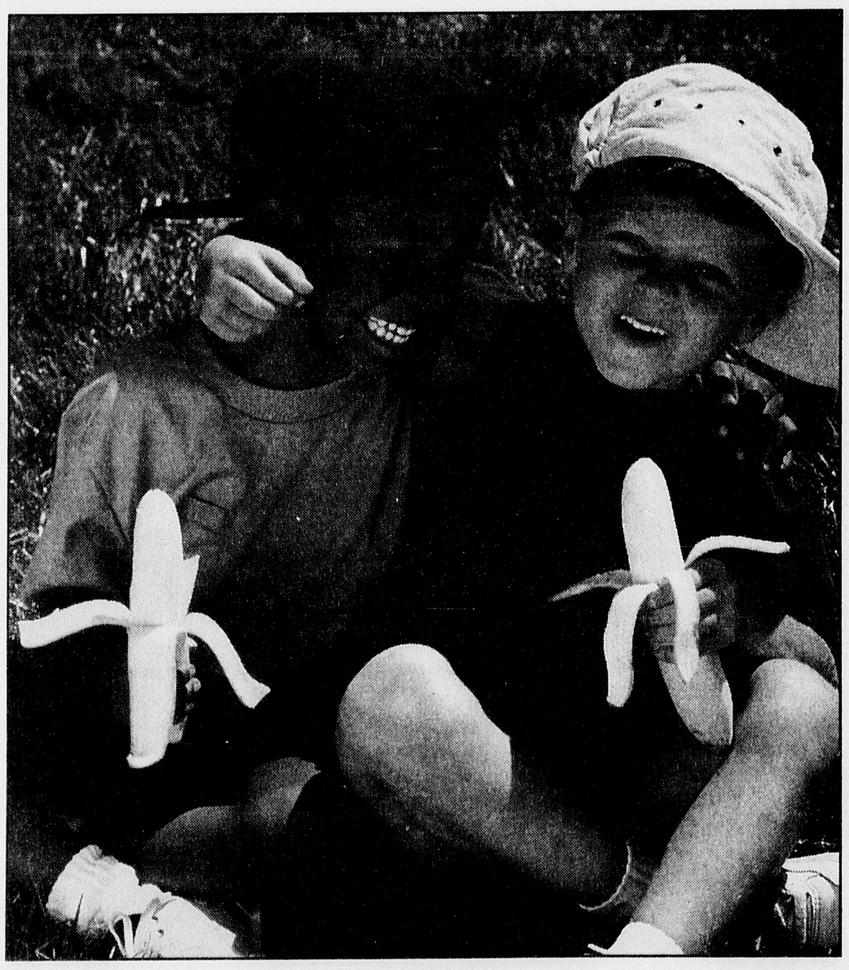

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus comes to the Arco Arena today (Sept. 3) through Sunday, and tickets may be purchased from the Arco Arena box office or through Bass outlets. Call 923-2277 for information.

Closer seats, and seats near the center ring, will make for more enjoyment, but the little tykes will probably be so engrossed in the spectacle of the circus that they won't care too much if they're consigned to the "nosebleed section."

It's darn good entertainment.

New Titles

Days of Gold: The California Gold Rush and the American Nation.* Malcolm J. Rohrbough. University of California Press. 308 pages.

The discovery of gold in 1948 not only changed the spirit of California but the nation. Professor Rohrbough provides an extensively documented social history of the Gold Rush and the men and women it affected. The absence of the 49ers from American communities left behind spouses, girlfriends, and single women and eventually reshaped patterns of social life. The Gold Rush, argues Rohrbough, was not solely a California experience, but an experience which created a social frenzy nationwide.

HIV Law: A Survival Guide to the Legal System for People Living with HIV.* Paul Hampton Crockett. 230 pages.

As an attorney and a man living with HIV, Paul Hampton Crockett addresses the most pressing challenges faced by those with HIV and AIDS. He provides practical advice on how to understand and work within the confines of a social structure comprised of a complicated legal system, cost-conscious insurance industry, and bureaucratic government. Crockett includes current information on: estate planning, job protection, and debt management.

Folklore, Myths and Legends: A World Perspective.* Donna Rosenberg. NTC Publishing. 488 pages.

Donna Rosenberg compiles some of the world's most memorable folk tales, myths, and legends into this enjoyable anthology. Her writing is vivid and alluring as she captures the essence of tales from Africa to the Far East. This collection includes familiar works like Prometheus, Faust, and the Mahabharata, but also unfamiliar works like "Wiley and the Hairy Man," "Oisin Mac Finn, Poet of the Fianna," and "The Woman with One Hand." The author also provides an historical and cultural discussion.
